in the late 1930s a number of american women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation s entry into world war ii while their story is fairly well known margaret paton walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that american intervention was absolutely necessary paton walsh recounts how the united states became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of american women who faced it as a necessary evil covering the period between 1935 and 1941 she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women s organizations informal women s networks and even male dominated lobbying groups in the great debate over whether america should enter the war some women favored aid to the allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct u s involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a nazi victory paton walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day elizabeth cutter morrow whose son in law charles lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman supported the revision of the neutrality acts to allow the sale of arms to the allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast soon other women joined this debate esther brunauer of the aaup journalist dorothy thompson and organizations like the league of women voters and national women s trade union league broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate american aid for the allied cause focusing on the conflict in europe paton walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the lend lease program for america s entry into the war but supported it nevertheless by late 1941 the women s division of the fight for freedom committee had been established no longer merely advocating aid to britain to keep american boys out of battle this organization supported direct american involvement in the war as a means of stopping nazi oppression while most historians have focused on women's pacifism. Paton Walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs. Our war too is a story of American women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace. It expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on American public opinion over the build up to the war.

As politicians and judges argue over the original intent of our country's founding fathers, the American founding itself continues to inspire a prodigious amount of research and commentary reflecting a bewildering array of methods and interpretations. Alan Gibson now offers readers an insightful and convenient guide through this daunting and sprawling body of scholarship. Comprehensive and judicious, interpreting the founding provides summaries and analyses of the leading interpretive frameworks that have guided the study of the founding since the publication of Charles Beard's An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution in 1913. Gibson argues that scholarship on the founding is no longer steered by a single dominant approach or even by a set of questions that control its direction. He also examines the challenges posed to founding scholarship by this diversity and complexity and the possibilities opened by new avenues of inquiry that have recently emerged. Scholars of the founding including Louis Hartz, Bernard Bailyn, Gordon Wood, and Garry Wills that best exemplify different schools of interpretation. Gibson focuses on six approaches that have dominated the modern study of the founding: progressive, Lockean, liberal, republican, Scottish enlightenment, multicultural, and multiple traditions. Approaches for each approach he traces its fundamental assumptions, revealing deeper ideological and methodological differences between schools of thought that on the surface seem to differ only about the interpretation of historical facts. While previous accounts have treated the study of the founding as the sequential replacement of one paradigm by another, Gibson argues that all of these interpretations survive as alternative and still viable approaches. Each has simultaneously illuminated and masked core truths about the American founding. He renders a balanced account of the current debate over the origins and foundations of the American republic and offers solid footing on the path to understanding the vast literature devoted to this important subject.

A historian debunks four dozen PC myths about our nation's past. Over the last forty years, history textbooks have become more and more politically correct and distorted about our country's past, argues Professor Larry Schweikart. The result, he says, is that students graduate from high school and even college with twisted beliefs about economics, foreign policy, war, religion, race, relations, and many other subjects as he did in his popular a patriot s history of the united states professor schweikart corrects liberal bias by rediscovering facts that were once widely known he challenges distorted books by name and debunks forty eight common myths a sample the founders wanted to create a wall of separation between church and state lincoln issued the emancipation proclamation only because he needed black soldiers truman ordered the bombing of hiroshima to intimidate the soviets with atomic diplomacy mikhaïl gorbachev not ronald reagan was responsible for ending the cold war america s past though not perfect is far more admirable than you were probably taught
