recently a travel account and 700 photographs came to light by the hand of leo boer a former student of the École biblique et archéologique française in jerusalem who at the age of 26 in 1953 4 visited many archaeological sites in the area of present day israel and the palestinian territories these documents inspired 20 internationally renowned scholars many of whom excavated at the sites they describe to report on what we know today of nine particular sites chosen from the many that leo boer visited 60 years ago jerusalem khirbet et tell ʿi samaria sebaste tell balata shechem tell es sultan jericho khirbet qumran caesarea megiddo and bet shean rather than focusing on the history of these sites the contributors describe the history of the archaeological expeditions who excavated these sites over the years what were the specific aims of their campaigns what techniques and methods did they use how did they interpret these excavations what finds were most noteworthy and finally what are the major misconceptions held by the former excavators several themes are interwoven amongst the contributions and variously discussed such as identification of biblical sites regional surveys underwater archaeology archaeothanatology archaeology and politics archaeology and science and heritage management this unique collection of images and essays offers to scholars working in the region previously unpublished materials and interpretations as well as new photographs for students of archaeology ancient or biblical history and theology it contains both a detailed archaeological historiography and explores some highly relevant specific themes finally the superb quality of boer's photography provides an unprecedented insight into the archaeological landscape of post war palestine for anyone interested in biblical history and archaeology deeply stratified settlements are a distinctive site type featuring prominently in diverse later prehistoric landscapes of the old world their massive materiality has attracted the curiosity of lay people and archaeologists alike nowadays a wide variety of archaeological projects are tracking the lifestyles and social practices that led to the building up of such superimposed artificial hills however prehistoric tell dwelling communities are too often approached from narrow local perspectives or discussed within strict time and culture specific debates there is a great potential to learn from such ubiquitous archaeological manifestations as the physical outcome of cross cutting dynamics and comparable underlying forces irrespective of time and space this volume tackles tells and tell like sites as a transversal phenomenon whose commonalities and divergences are poorly understood yet may benefit from cross cultural comparison thus the book intends to assemble a representative range of ongoing theory and science based fieldwork projects targeting this kind of sites with the aim of encompassing a variety of social and material dynamics the volume's scope is diachronic from the earliest neolithic up to the iron age and covers a very large region from iberia in western europe to syria in the middle east the core of the volume comprises a selection of the most remarkable contributions to the session with a similar title celebrated in the european association of archaeologists annual meeting held at barcelona in 2018 in addition the book includes invited chapters to round out underrepresented areas and periods in the eaa session with relevant research programmes in the old world to accomplish such a cross cultural course the book takes a case based approach with contributions disparate both in their theoretical foundations from household archaeology social agency and formation theory and their research strategies including geophysical survey microarchaeology and high resolution
